office on Dama Road in Kenema. Junisa-Jolla said this political defect was in line with their erstwhile National Coordinator, Chief Sam Hinga Norman's request.

"Chief Norman is still our commander. We are denouncing our Sierra Leone Peoples' Party (SLPP) membership on his instructions. We are going by whatever he says," he said, adding that Norman has ordered over 400 ex-combatants to join the PMDC.

"The only task now is how to win over ex-Kamajors fighters in the east who are still supporting the SLPP," he said and called on all former CDF members to throw their weight behind the PMDC.

Norman is indicted for war crimes and is presently facing trial before the UN-backed Special Court for Sierra Leone.
Surgeons perform operation in Senegal

Special Court indictees Chief Sam Hinga Norman and Issa Sesay are fighting for their lives after going through what has been described as a successful surgical operation at the military hospital in Dakar, Senegal, where they are being held since their flight to that country for medical treatment.

According to a source from the Hinga Norma family the operation was done last Wednesday and lasted three hours.

The source further revealed that the two indictees have not complained of any maltreatment at the hands of their hosts, and that they are responding to treatment. Hinga Norman, the source maintained was suffering from hip problems.

"Pa Norman called me on the phone on Sunday and from our interaction, he seems okay," disclosed a family member who spoke to this press over the weekend on condition of anonymity.

"He said the doctors have been very kind to them and the facilities are good," the source added.

One of Hinga Norman's sons left for Dakar last Wednesday, the day the operation was conducted.

Hinga Norman and Issa Sesay were taken to the Senegalese capital last month for medical treatment, for which facilities are not available here.

Sam Hinga Norman, former Deputy Minister of Defence and also former coordinator of the Civil Defence Force (CDF) and Issa Sesay, former leader of the Revolutionary United Front (RUF) were both indicted by the Special Court of Sierra Leone for crimes committed during the 11-year-war.

It is alleged that it was during his arrest at his Liverpool Street office that he sustained the hip problem as he was roughed, handcuffed and whisked off in a waiting vehicle.

Both Hinga Norman and Issa Sesay have appeared at the Special Court in Freetown and are merely awaiting ruling on their cases.

The Special Court ruling is expected before the end of this year.
The Need for Peace in Guinea

BY JOSUA CAMARA

We cannot forget the pain and the fruits of war. Bloodshed, widows, war prisoners, destruction of properties, hate, vengeance, just to mention a few. What may be happening now in neighboring Guinea? This war continues as long as the people of Guinea want to remove by all means the sitting President Lansana Conte, who have ruled the country for over twenty years in an environment marred with corruption, nepotism and tribalism.

Wart! War we don’t want! Not now.

These are words that we, as Guineans, have been hearing daily since the January 10, 2007 when the Guinean union workers federation demonstrated for a fair condition of service and increase of wage and salaries. This demonstration has taken a turn as political parties are also being accused of war profiteers and from the presidency for as they put it "enough is enough!". On the other hand, president Lansana Conte is refusing to hand over power. He is close to the Guinean Army where he comes from and he has empowered the Army with heavy military ammunition, and as if that is not enough just to ensure he continues to hold on to power he has secured the services of heavy military assistance from Guinea Bissau about six hundred army officers and men fully deployed in the strategic location in the borders and they are on the standby. Instead of all these military might the people are more desperate to ensure that president Conte leave the seat of power as was evident in the recent demonstrations that have claimed the lives of over one hundred and twenty people from various towns including the capital city, and other major towns in the interior.

The International community and ECOWAS should not sit round this time, because I expect them to intervene during the period under review, before the deadline the Trade Unions gave to the president to avert death of innocent civilians by calling both parties to resolve the impasse.

Civil society groups have joined the workers federation this time round not only for increase in wages and salaries but went on the rampage, demanding that president Lansana Conte go the government in the country. As if that was not enough they called on him to restructure the government since he is not feeling well, to allow a strong and neutral prime minister to be the head of the government while he (Conte) remains Head of State in a ceremonial capacity. The president agreed to the demands of the Trade Unions by appointing a Prime Minister in the person of his minister of Presidential Affairs Mr. Eugène Camara, who was totally rejected by the populace in fact the people went berserk going to the streets of Conacry and other provincial headquarters towns demanding that president Lansana Conte should retire.

The demonstrators have destroyed the properties including police stations you can see thousands of people advancing in the streets shouting that president Conte must go even though security forces shot on them they continue to advance further. Burning tires mounted road blockade in the major streets, attacking government offices. You can see the youths armed with weapons and cutlasses.

The situation in Guinea is controverted. The solution to Guinea unrest lies in negotiations. This is because we have realized that the guns can no longer solve any conflict instead it ignite it further so the way forward is dialogue involving both parties in the interest of the people of Guinea who are currently suffering due to the high cost of living and the added to the strike action initiated by the Guinean upon workers federation.

The only forward is for president Conte to see reason and step down in a bid to avert more bloodshed. He should also realize that when he took power over twenty years ago the people of Guinea hail him and welcome him, now that the people have realized that president Conte can no longer administer the country effectively he should retire peacefully. The situation in Guinea is very pathetic prior to the general strike, as if there is no government in place, everybody can do what he likes, especially the soldiers who can take advantage on you for no just cause and you have no where to report as you are afraid of reprisal from the soldiers president conte has for ever the ability and capacity to administrate the state as corruption has become institutionalized.

The situation is unfolding in Guinea, Sierra Leone one of the worst cases in Africa. The president allows for any spill over effect. Especially so, when there are constant threats of civil conflict and we are not afford to go back what we have experienced before. Guinea is our close neighbour which has influence on our socio-economic and political affair, therefore events in Guinea be political, economic or commercial has a cascading effect on the evolution of events in Sierra Leone.

The people of Sierra Leone are concern about situation in Guinea this is because among other things that president conte has retired and that the president himself has never put in place a constitutionally accepted transition mechanism and secondly the president is very close to the Guinean army this may have likely created a situation, which would cause the military to take over the running of the state in the event that the president becomes incapacitated.

The International community and ECOWAS should not sit round this time, because I expect them to intervene during the period under review, before the deadline the Trade Unions gave to the president to avert death of innocent civilians by calling both parties to resolve the impasse. Now that the protests have resumed we are calling on them to intervene as quickly as possible until the situation goes out of control. We are calling on the chairmanship of the African union, president John Kuffour of Ghana to delve into the Guinean problem because it becomes uncontrollable.

This is because Sierra Leone had been one of the most turbulent conflicted on women, young adults and children, many were maimed killed sexually mutilated and abused. It was the worse indignity suffered by the citizens of Sierra Leone, so we do not want it to happen to Guinea or any part of the world, may peace prevail in Guinea.

The fire next door – why we must act

It has been said that when Guinea sneezes Sierra Leone catches cold. This is so because we have come to depend almost wholly and solely on Guinea for the supply of our basic needs.

It is no secret that because the Lebanese have found it difficult to bring in products through our Ports which is due largely to the extremely high dues levied by the NRA, the lot has fallen on the Fullahs next door.

The Fullahs have slowly taken over the import trade and there are valid suggestions that they now bring in most of the goods which the Lebanese sell in their shops.

The onions issue now is the typical example of how the bulk of trade (or what some would call control of the economy) is slowly shifting from the hands of the Lebanese to the Fullahs.

The price of onions in the local markets have almost tripled just because the bulk of our supply of onions used to come from Guinea.

The point here is because of the crisis in Guinea, our economy has already started suffering hiccups.

This is all the more reason why our leadership must become involved in the problems of Guinea.

We say so because Guinea has over the years been our most steadfast supporter.

Under the rule of Sheku Toure we saw Guinea getting involved in any small problem that we have in the country to the extent of helping to undermine our first experience of military rule – whether in hindsight that could be judged as good or bad.

During the rebel war, Guinea maintained a steadfast and unwavering position, even when Liberia was looking the other way.

Indeed Guinea has hosted two heads of state from Sierra Leone after they fled from the wrath of the military.

If nothing else our present Head of State has to be more than grateful to the Guinean leader for his sojourn their during the AFRC days.

This is why Sierra Leone must be seen to actively take an interest in what is happening in Guinea.

There are indications that there must have been some behind the scenes moves taking place, but this is not the time for silent diplomacy – let us leave that for the AFRC.

We believe this is an important period that the Sierra Leone government must show leadership in the Mano River Union by being the first to act and be seen to actively engage President Lansana Conte and the trade unions.

The point here is not to say that President Lansana Conte is stubborn, but to show our willingness to help in whatever way possible to put out the fire next door.

Guinea were the first to host talks between the AFRC and ECOWAS during our crisis why should we not do the same?

For us it is a shame that President Alpha Konare should be the first to enter Guinea and plead with Lansana Conte when our President is supposed to have a more closer and intimate relationship than President Konare.

Moreover the silence maintained by Sierra Leone is disgraceful to say the least, because it shows the Guinean people that we should not be relied upon to help them when they need us most.
The Guinean situation is no threat to Sierra Leone - AIG

Crisis in the sister Republic of Guinea - could this be a threat to the security of Sierra Leone? No, explained the Acting Assistant Inspector General of police for Operations, Morrie Lengor at the usual Tuesday Police Press Briefing.

He told journalists that there was no cause for alarm concerning the security of the nation because of the situation in the Guinean Republic, as all modalities have been put in place for any spill over of civilians or armed men into the country.

Mechanisms he said are in place to stop a recurrence of what caused the spill over of armed men into the country in the early nineties, that later turned out to be catastrophic for the country, leading to ten years of war with devastating effect, economically, socially and politically.

The situation in Guinea the senior police officer acknowledged must be a concern for many Sierra Leoneans, but that fears of each and every Sierra Leonean must be allayed as the police are working with the Office of National Security (ONS).

In continuation the police administrator noted that the country was totally safe as even the visiting British Deputy Prime Minister, John Prescott in an interview with the UN Radio has attested to this, and even the UNHCR's Goodwill Ambassador Team leader George Galaras has done the same.

Was the acting AIG bragging? No, he commented. The police he said were really effective in their community policing, as it could be seen in their unearthing of a cache of ammunitions at a Pump Station in the diamondiferous town of Tongo.

The cache of 34,000 assorted AK 47, 64 AK 47 Grenade launchers, 1 hand Grenade launcher, 121 AK empty magazines, 43 G3 empty magazines, 4 sealed boxes 7.64 rounds of ammunition, he said were discovered by diamond diggers in the region and that everything had been brought to Freetown and investigations were on.

These were left-over by the ten years war and not a new dump of ammunition he explained.

The row between cattle rearers and land owners in the Wara Wara Mountain Area has been laid to rest by an agreement on bye-laws between the parties involved, he told the press, though he did give details.

Another dispute also in the north between workers at the Bintumani Radio station in Kabala has also been done with, he stated.

With the frequent theft of the National Power Authority's cables, and the recent one at Cline Town, two arrests he said were made and presently investigations continue.

All these he said were due to the relentless effort on the part of the police towards their responsibility in securing the lives and properties of the people of this nation.
Amputee Nations cup ends today

The four Nations amputee tournament will finally end today at the National Stadium main bowl. The two teams representing Sierra Leone have been very much impressive throughout the tournament by recording some emphatic victories against the visitors.

After yesterday’s semis, the home teams are billed to play against either Ghana or Liberia.

The Ghanaian side has since picked up their best form, after losing the opening match to Sierra Leone and set to unleash terror this evening.

Sierra Leone boasted by a cream of talented players in the tournament has vowed to emerge as the first country to win the maiden edition of the Nations Cup.

“All what we need is the nation’s support. People should go to the stadium to cheer us up to victory. We need extra motivation,” striker Maxwell Jones implored.

On the other hand, the Ghanaians are bent on taking the glory from a foreign turf.

“We made series of mistakes in the first encounter with the Sierra Leone team. I but we’ve put that nightmare behind our backs as we have bounced back for we, not even Sierra Leone could stop us this time round,” striker Gyanfile told the press after their first win against Liberia.

Today’s final will be witnessed by high profile dignitaries who have consented to grace the big game. A musical jamboree will also be followed featuring the best musicians in the country. The midweek festive occasion will also serve as joyous moment for celebrants who would like to observe the Valentine Day, the Public Relation Office, and Albert Mustapha disclosed.

Liberian president to outline development policies to lending groups

WASHINGTON__Liberian President Ellen Johnson Sirleaf warned Tuesday that armed conflict could return to her country if the international community does not act quickly to assist her year-old government in broad-based reconstruction efforts. "Time is pressing. The risk of return to war in post-conflict society is high," Johnson Sirleaf told a World Bank gathering of international development experts and delegates from at least 20 countries. Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice drew applause when she promised to wipe out $391 million (euro300 million) in Liberian debt to the United States. She pledged other efforts to reduce Liberia's $3.7 billion (euro2.8 billion) debt.

Guinea protests over martial law

Protestors have taken to the streets in at least four towns in Guinea, angered by the Guinean President Lansana Conte's decision to impose martial law. There was also gunfire in the capital, Conakry, as security forces clashed with demonstrators calling on their ailing leader to step down. Mr Conte declared a "state of siege" last night and told the army to restore order after three days of violence. A curfew has also been declared and the military told to prevent a civil war. Correspondents say the streets of Conakry are largely deserted, except for the military patrols. People are only allowed to leave their homes between 1600 and 2000 local time.

Neighboring Sierra Leone voices concern over Guinea

FREETOWN, Feb 13, 2007 (AFP) - Sierra Leone President Ahmad Tejan Kabbah on Tuesday said west African regional leaders were working to quickly end the crisis in neighbouring Guinea. "I have spoken personally to (Guinea) President Lansana Conte and other government officials in Guinea on resolving the problem," Kabbah, whose country is recovering from a civil war that ended five years ago, said on state radio. Guinea is in the grip of political unrest that has claimed more than 100 lives and forced Conte to impose martial law, after weeks of protests calling for the president to step down.

Guinea Capital Largely Calm Under Curfew, Marital Law

By Jordan Davis
Dakar

Guinean military are patrolling the streets of the capital, Conakry, enforcing a 20-hour-a-day curfew declared by President Lansana Conte that is intended to end demonstrations urging him to step down. From our regional bureau in Dakar, Jordan Davis reports.

Despite a curfew, some Conakry residents were seen walking in the streets. Gunfire was heard in the capital's suburbs during the morning as youth protesters were dispersed by security forces.

But local journalist Maseco Conde says by and large the city is calm.

Conde says military vehicles are patrolling the streets and the military has set up checkpoints along major roads and intersections.

Under a new curfew, Guineans are allowed to leave their homes for four hours during the late afternoon and early evening.

Mr. Conte declared martial law late Monday, ordering the military to protect the country against what he says is the risk of civil war.

Unions and opposition parties have stepped up calls for the president to resign, rejecting his appointment of Eugene Camara as prime minister on Friday.

They say Mr. Camara is too close to Mr. Conte to lead the national unity government that was promised last month to end to an 18-day general strike.

Observers say the declaration of martial law through February 23 shows Mr. Conte strongly depends on the military to stay in power, despite growing popular discontent.

Gilles Yabi, a Dakar-based analyst with International Crisis Group, says the Guinean leader has made a number of promotions within the army in recent days to secure their support.

"I think it is an obvious way of buying loyalty of the army," he said. "It seems like this strategy is still working because up to now we have seen the official hierarchy of the army following the president."

Many analysts say the crisis in Guinea risks destabilizing neighboring countries, including Sierra Leone, which is still recovering from a devastating civil war that ended five years ago.

Sierra Leonean President Ahmad Tejan Kabbah says he and other regional leaders are in contact with Mr. Conte and hope to find a peaceful end to Guinea's political turmoil.
Political unrest in Guinea has killed more than 100 people this year, including at least several dozen since Mr. Camara's appointment.

Opponents of Mr. Conte, who is in his seventies and suffering from diabetes, say he is becoming increasingly erratic in his behavior.

In January, unions called their third general strike in a little over a year to protest Mr. Conte personally intervening to release two political allies jailed in connection with a corruption investigation.

Yahya Jammeh-Lansana Conteh compare and contrast-Why Gambians should "merge" and strike!

By Pa Nderry M'Bai

When one compares and contrasts the leadership in Conakry with the leadership in Banjul it becomes so obvious that people can force dictators out. However, this can never be doable where loss of life is feared. First Guineans forced Conteh to appoint a PM Prime Minister which he swore not to do earlier on. When pressure mounted from his own citizens Conteh was forced to appoint a PM.

By Our Security Affairs Correspondent. When one compares and contrasts the leadership in Conakry with the leadership in Banjul it becomes so obvious that people can force dictators out. However, this can never be doable where loss of life is feared. First Guineans forced Conteh to appoint a PM Prime Minister which he swore not to do earlier on. When pressure mounted from his own citizens Conteh was forced to appoint a PM. We are in the second face of the state of affairs that will send Conteh into the gutters of African history. Between yesterday and today his army has killed 23 demonstrators! The price is so dear but Conteh will go!

Who is Lansana Conteh? Conteh was a fierce fighter who worked so hard to defend former President Ahmed Sekou Toure. When Toure passed away in 1984 he was replaced by his former docile Vice President Biavougi. Toure left a vacuum behind because he had dishonest Intellectuals who stayed with him for 26 years singing endless praises! As they were used to praising, not leading it was not so easy for them to replace Toure's iron fist. It was just so easy for Conteh to jail these lackeys and then usher the affairs of Guinea from 1984 to now.

This is what happens where Intellectual prostitutes are left behind to replace a leader-centered regime. Today Conteh is faced with the same serpents he inherited from the past. He is also faced with the same mercenary tendencies he used against former Presidents Samuel Doe and Charles Taylor of Liberia. Conteh has been meddling with the internal affairs of both Sierra Leone and Liberia. When former Coup leader Captain Strasser was chased out of Freetown he took a helicopter to Guinea, and then flew to the UK. Conteh has since been a hiding serpent himself competing Nigeria and Senegal in the Subregion.

The same Conteh maintained, fed, clothed, and sponsored mercenaries in Liberia only to help dislodge Charles Taylor. Why? Because Charles did not want to recognize the old man's so-called elder brother leadership within that area. Although a renowned bandit Taylor was right because Conteh was or is nothing but an old thief set to catch other thieves around town. The same phenomenon Conteh was using against his neighbours will set Guinea in flames sooner that he expects it to happen. The same Guinea-Liberia-Mercenaries came home after Taylor was forced into exile. They could not stay in that country because their mission was to kill and destroy.

Now that President Sirleaf is ready to build and develop the Conteh-sponsored mercenaries can't stay any longer. They have no justification anymore. These same elements are back into Guinea with old professions that are so deadly. Senseless killers are like drug addicts, they also get addicted to spilling blood. This is why they cannot stay happy where there is no turmoil. Now that the situation is so volatile and the fruits of war are ripe Conteh has no option but maintain a 20 hours curfew. Alongside he is threatening to impose what? Martial law! Martial law? This means the regime is ending so fast. When dictators use curfew and martial means they are no longer in control! These are the highest orders they can use as threats. After that stage the former Liberian mercenaries who were trained by Conteh himself will come back to bite him. Guinea Conakry is far from being stable! So far from being stable! Why is President Jammeh comparable to President Conteh....? Both men replaced power vacuum through coup d'etat after serving as special body guards to rulers who stayed in power for over two decades. Sekou Toure was there for 26 years and then died in 1984. Sir Dawda Jawara was also in power for 29 years and then over thrown in 1994, ten years after Sekou Toure died. Both President Jammeh and Conteh are not seasoned Intellectuals. They both have the tendency of wanting to rule like former African kings. Both men share a common marabout in Guinea. Both men are seriously ill while leading.

President Conteh is being forced to leave because of his health condition as a diabetic patient. Next Yahya Jammeh will also be forced to leave because his mental health is deteriorating so fast these days. Scientifically there are people who have already matched Jammeh's speeches to his body language therefore; they have proven that the man is not mentally stable. Gambians have been cultured in unreasonable "niceties" this is why it will take them the whole world's time to confront Jammeh and his thugs. However, as time goes on people will think about taking to the streets and send him away. President Jammeh should be impeached for being mentally unstable.

Otherwise another uprising will take place in The Gambia just as it is taking place in Guinea Conakry today. President Jammeh according to certain reliable sources may even contemplate on sending Gambian soldiers to Guinea Conakry if his uncle Lansana calls for help. This will be a blunder in some minds but in Jammeh's it will be justified as a Pan African move. Yahya Jammeh will suffer the same fate like Conteh. Jammeh like Conteh did in Liberia, has also been helping brew a war in Senegal.

He was likewise holding secret meetings with Gambian mercenaries who were fighting in Liberia. The same mercenaries are back home while others are part of his immediate circle. President Jammeh will be taken by a very big surprise. Let him just watch. The steam near Lansana Conteh of Guinea Conakry has already started heating Kanilai. Gloomy days ahead!
