Welcoming Hinga Norman and Co

We in the People's Movement for Democratic Change (PMDC), are elated by the recent declaration of all nine detainees at the Special Court for Sierra Leone, for our party, ahead of the crucially important Presidential and Parliamentary Elections on Saturday, July 28, 2007.

We are not in any way surprised at such a move, because it goes without saying that any well-meaning and sober-minded Sierra Leonean would want to join forces with us, to give the worried so-called Sierra Leone People's Party (SLPP), a good beating at the polls.

We knew such a move was going to be taken, and were waiting patiently for it to materialize. It was on Thursday, 11th January, 2007, that the indicted finally came up with a jointly signed press release from their cells, declaring their support for the PMDC and damning the SLPP.

A portion of the said press release reads: "That like us, we urge our supporters, sympathizers, friends, relations and well-wishers to support the People's Movement for Democratic Change (PMDC), which is the only Political Party we jointly and individually believe in, to save our country, Sierra Leone, and bring peace, reconciliation, unity, love and stability to our nation".

Indeed, the PMDC is the only God-sent party that has what it takes to move this country from its current state of backwardness and bankruptcy, to a height all of us would be proud of. The decision by the Special Court Detainees: Sam Hinga Norman, Moinina Fofana, and Alieu Musa Kondo (all of the former Kamajormovement), Issa Hassan Sesay, Augustine Gbow and Morris Kallon (all of the former RUF); and Tamba Brima, Ibrahim Bazzy Kamara and Santigie Bobor Kani (all of the former AFRC), is a clear indication that the PMDC is perceived by many who are deprived and suppressed in particular as being the only party that has come to redeem this country from the slavery it has been subjected to by the SLPP.

Their decision has no doubt placed the SLPP in a badly disadvantaged position, especially so when it continues to emerge that the growing popularity of the PMDC is both unprecedented and un-

We are not going to quarrel with that because they have the right to their opinions (either sensible or foolish), but the question is 'what are the likes of Victor Reider (who reportedly recruited the dreaded RUF former rebel leader, Late Foday Saybana Sankoh, who now happens to be the Publicity Secretary or better put official Spokesman of the SLPP), Eldred Collins (former Spokesman of the RUF) and Alieu Kamara alias Territorial Integrity (former Spokesman of the infamous AFRC junta), doing in the SLPP? The writings are on the wall that the PMDC is a melting pot and a haven for all Sierra Leoneans who are keen to see the development of our beloved country. We are ready to work with all classes of Sierra Leoneans; and we will keep our doors wide open to receive all well-meaning Sierra Leoneans who are convinced that positive change, and not continuity of the same old bullshit, is what this country needs at this crucial period in our history.

On the basis of that, we wholeheartedly welcome Chief Sam Hinga Norman and his colleagues, in the ranks of the PMDC. They can be rest assured that they have made the right decision. It's not about them, or about us, but about the future of the country.
Promoting Children’s Right

What is surprising to many people in this country is, why is it that the UN Convention on the rights of the child is still not ratified by the Sierra Leone Parliament? Indeed children have certain inalienable rights that Governments that are really interested in development should not fail to recognize, as children are often referred to as “the future leaders of tomorrow.” It is difficult to see a vested interest in ignoring the passing of the bill that promotes the rights of the child.

Whatever the case may be Sierra Leone is one of the countries that is supposed to be at the vanguard of any enactment and implementation of laws in favour of children’s rights for several reasons. In the first place this country has a very poor standing on the UNDP Human Development index that annually the standard of living in various countries of the world.

This country has one of the lowest literacy rates, and a high infant and maternal mortality rates in the world, all of which do not augur well for the survival and welfare of children considered as the cornerstone of national development. Indeed compared to adults, children are weaker and depend on their parents and guardians to safeguard their rights and interests, including feeding, accommodation, education, clothing and early upbringing.

The United Nations Children’s Fund (UNICEF) and Plan International (Sierra Leone) are two of the many International NGOs that have been playing pivotal roles in humanitarian actions in favour of children’s welfare. Both UNICEF and Plan International, as well as several other NGOs such as Handicap International, World Vision, Action Aid have been collaborating with the Ministry of Social Welfare, Gender and Children’s Affairs to raise awareness about the need to cater to the welfare of children in this country.

What the Country Director of Plan International Mr. Samuel Paulos indicated at the British council in July 2004 during the launching of the child-friendly version of the UN convention on the Rights of the child is still as relevant today as before. He urged stakeholders of children affairs to put in place programmes that are geared towards alleviating child poverty. Education and providing skill training opportunities, are some of the means to cater to the welfare of children in this country.

Indeed some of the problems confronting children, besides poverty, include the trampling on their fundamental human rights. Some people have the impression that the place of the child is to be sent on errands and to do the household chores. In short, they regard children, specially other people’s children as instruments for domestic work.

In the words of Mr. Samuel Paulos, if one would pass the question, what is the meaning of a child in the typical African family, the response would be that the child in the African family is nothing but someone who should obey whatever norms that the society may have, such as being a symbol of prestige. He added that the true meaning, though unrealistic is that the African child should be seen and not heard.

"Now is the time to extricate the African child from some of these dogmas and consider the child as a partner in development," Mr. Paulos maintained. Indeed during the decade-long civil war many children were obliged to become child soldiers against their will and were in some instances used as human shields at the warfront by their adult superiors. Many Sierra Leonian girl children were reduced to serving as “sex” objects for combatants willingly or against their will very often after being captured by dissidents.

Some of them were forced to be addicted to drugs, to violence and to kill, while even in normal times, stories abound of children being overworked and subjected to inhuman treatments such as market selling or working on the farms.

According to Article 7 of the convention on the Rights of the Child, “the child shall be registered immediately after birth and shall have the right to a name, a nationality and the right to be cared for by the parents.” Moreover children have the right to choose a religion of their choice and the fundamental right to education.

One of the many outcomes of the rebel war has been the state of lawlessness, violence and the increase in street children, all of which have left a heavy burden on Government and stakeholders in children affairs. It is indeed regrettable that many parents and guardians regards educating a child as a privileged not a right.
Taylor's head lawyer in Monrovia, claims violation

Written by Joey Kennedy

The legal defense team of former President Charles Taylor has complained about the monitoring of private conferences of Mr. Taylor and his lawyers in The Hague.

The lead counsel for Mr. Taylor told a news conference Wednesday, a camera has been mounted in the room where legal conferences are held for Mr. Taylor in The Hague.

Mr. Karim Khan alleged this is a violation of the rights and privacy of the detained former Liberian President and his defense team.

He said the defense team of Mr. Taylor has filed a formal complaint to the President of the UN-backed Special Court sitting in The Hague.

The defense team of the former Liberian leader says it needs adequate time, resources and facilities to ensure the effective defense of Mr. Taylor.

The defense team of Mr. Taylor also comprises former Liberian Justice Minister, Lavali Supuwood and Avi Singh, a member of the California Bar Association.

Nations Pledge Not to Use Child Soldiers

By JENNY BARCHFIELD

PARIS _ African, Asian and South American nations where child fighters have been used in war endorsed a new international agreement Tuesday that commits them to stopping the practice and punishing those who recruit youngsters as combatants. Some nations hailed the text, which carries moral but no legal weight, as a breakthrough. But others said it may be no more than empty promises and that more than words are needed to rehabilitate children mentally and physically scarred by war. "We've lost a whole generation of children," said Liberia's deputy minister of education, Hawa Goll-Kotchi. "It's scary." Sierra Leone, Liberia, Congo, Sri Lanka, Colombia, Sudan and Somalia _ just some of the nations where children have been recruited
