State of Human Rights in Sierra Leone- HRCSL report out

The Human Rights Commission Sierra Leone (HRCSL) has released their first human rights report entitled the state of the Human Rights Reports in the country.

Explaining about the report to the press yesterday at the Commission’s headquarters, its chairman Mrs Jamesina King disclosed that the commission covered activities from January- December 2007 as they looked at the achievements, challenges and state of human rights in the country.

The Commission observed that despite the provision of the right to life as provided for in Article 6 of the international covenant on civil and political rights, article 3 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and article 4 of the African Charter as restated in section 15 and 16 of the 1991 constitution of Sierra Leone, there are still unacceptably high rates of infant and maternal mortality. The report states that UNDP human development report 2007 quoting maternal mortality at 1800 per 100,000 live births and infant mortality at 170 per 1,000.

The commission also described as slow the response of the police to a number of armed robbery in the capital leaving a sense of insecurity undermining enjoyment of the right to life, liberty and security of the person. “The failure or delay by the police and courts in the investigation, prosecution and adjudication of criminal cases involving deprivation of other forms of property also seriously threatens this right” the commission stated.

The Human Rights Commission also noted that the seditious libel laws in the public order Act of 1965 were used by the government and reports of some paramount chiefs preventing opposition parties from openly campaigning or holding rallies in their chiefdoms. Domestic and sexual violence continued to be a significant source of human Rights violations during the course of the year for which they received many complaints most of which were referred to the family support unit of the police which generally responded well and took action. They also took into consideration as they put it the controversial practice of female genital cutting as there were reports of politicians sponsoring mass initiation.

Across the country, the commission reported, children continue to be detained with adults in contravention of the international minimum standards on juvenile justice and national law. “This situation is due to the fact that in the whole of Sierra Leone there are only two juvenile remand

US Embassy Confirms Joint Search

The United States Embassy here has admitted that it undertook a joint criminal investigation exercise led by the Liberian National Police (LNP) at the White Flower home of former President Charles Taylor Sunday.

The exercise has sparked rancor amongst Mr. Taylor’s loyalists, threatening that future attempts will be met with stiff resistance.

The US Embassy told this paper Tuesday that the joint search with local security, armed with a writ from a court, had nothing to do with the UN backed Special Court for Sierra Leone.

“The exercise Sunday was a joint criminal investigation led by the LNP and it has nothing to do with the Special Court,” an official of the US Embassy Public Diplomatic Section said Tuesday.

Asked for further comment, the official who insisted that this paper attributed his comments to the US Embassy, meaning it is mission’s official position, said the US could not comment on ongoing criminal investigation.

Last Sunday, US Marines led LNP officers stormed Mr. Taylor’s White Flower residence for what is now known as the reconstruction of a crime scene.

At first many thought the search was directed at Mr. Taylor, who is currently on trial in The Hague for alleged war crimes committed in neighboring Sierra Leone.

But it has now been established that the Sunday search is more linked to his son, on trial in the US, and not the father’s.

Chucky Taylor, Jr., is facing charges for human rights violations while he served as a feared commander in his father’s Special Security Service, with allegations that he executed several persons.

A witness in The Hague, testifying against his father, said he saw the Chucky executed a number of Liberians and Sierra Leoneans. The search, authorized by a write from a Liberian court, may have been conduct to gather material and other evidence against Chucky. Also on trial for US immigration violations.

Last Saturday morning individuals believed to be US Marines were seen mapping up the Congo Town White Flower home of Mr. Taylor for what is now known as the reconstruction of a crime scene.

The men believed to be US Marines mounted an instrument like a barometer, usually used for survey purposes, directly opposite the White Flower pointing towards Sinkor and later this writer who first misook them as conducting a kind of research saw them descending the hill leading to Pako Island behind White Flower and also mounted the instruments there pointing towards the Boulevard.

Charles Taylor Jr., is currently standing trial at a US Court in Florida for alleged human rights abuses. Under the Universal Law, some courts in countries such as the United States, Spain, UK, etc, have universal jurisdiction to prosecute crimes committed by their citizens or others in foreign countries.

JOINT CRIMINAL INVESTIGATION LEADS TO TAYLOR'S HOUSE

The NEWS has learnt that a joint criminal investigation led by the Liberian police in conjunction with American investigators is taking place in Monrovia, in which a search is required of former Liberian President Charles Taylor's residence.

According to a well-placed source, the U.S. Embassy cannot make any comment because the investigation is on-going.

But the source said the joint Criminal investigation is independent of the Sierra Leone's War Crimes Court sitting in The Hague where former president Taylor is being tried for bearing the greatest responsibility of war crimes and crimes against humanity committed in Sierra Leone.

The source did not say the nature of the crime for which the joint investigation is taking place.

Liberian police officers along with men believed to be United States Marines allegedly searched Taylor's house in Congo Town on Sunday, sparking off protest from Taylor's loyalists.

A spokesman for the Taylor's family, Sando Johnson claimed that the search was illegal since Sunday is a non-official working day, although the investigators took along with them a Sheriff and a writ from a Liberian court.

Chief Prosecutor Stephen Rapp

The Chief Prosecutor in the ongoing trial of former President Charles Ghankay Taylor, Stephen Rapp has denied that the recent search carried out at the residence of the former Liberian leader was done upon the instruction of the Special Court sitting in the Hague, The Netherlands. The spokesperson for the Special Court, Peter Anderson quoting Mr. Rapp recently said “the search was not done by the special court or at the request of the special court.” Mr. Anderson is currently in the Sierra Leonean capital, Freetown. The family of the former Liberian leader is disturbed after heavily Court denies armed US Officials searched the Taylor residence on Sunday, 22 June.

Former Bomi County lawmaker and spokesman of Taylor’s family, disclosed that, “The men came to the house in US embassy vehicles on Sunday with heavily armed national police officers and took the keys from the security guards at gunpoint.”

According to the family, the Americans brandished a search warrant from the Special Court for Sierra Leone, where the former Liberian president is currently on trial for war crimes, but the court has denied any involvement.

“They pushed the security man out and went in. They were there for 40 minutes while the police officers prevented us from entering to see what they were doing,” Johnson said.

During the search a huge crowd gathered in front of the residence, and began to boo the Americans according to eye witness account. A lawyer for the family said the men showed him a warrant from the court, but that document must be found and disputed to verify the legality of the search.

Both the American embassy in Monrovia and the Minister of justice, Philip A. Z. Banks are yet to comment on the report.

Charles Taylor’s party, the former ruling National Patriotic Party (NPP), reacted with fury to the search on.

“I do not understand why the government will allow a bunch of gangsters to do what they feel like in our country,” Cyril Allen, former chairperson of the NPP, told a local radio station.
