3. In addition to the qualifications listed in General Hederstedt’s curriculum vitae, General Hederstedt has the following experience involving guerilla movements and peacekeeping:
 - i) In the 1970s and 80s General Hederstedt was involved in international peacekeeping operations in the Middle East including Lebanon, Gaza, Sinai, and the West Bank. In 1998, General Hederstedt was the Swedish Contingent commander in Lebanon and conducted many negotiations on various levels with several of the factions (e.g., PLO, PFLP, Hezbollah, Black September, Amal, etc. and Israeli supported Christian guerrilla parties).
 - ii) 1989-1992 General Hederstedt was the Course Director for UN Nordic Staff officers courses dealing with guerilla warfare. The General conducted fact-finding trips to trouble-spots all over the world including Cyprus, Kuwait, Iraq, Iran, and the Middle East (Israel, Gaza, and Lebanon).
 - iii) In 1989, Sweden together with Denmark started to build up a Peacekeeping centre in Harare, Zimbabwe to teach peacekeeping techniques. The programme was not completed because of the Zimbabwean authorities.
 - iv) During the 90s, General Hederstedt was on the ground monitoring the Balkan conflict. The General was responsible for Swedish participation in Bosnia, Macedonia, and Kosovo. Sweden was involved in all peacekeeping and peace enforcement operations on different levels. The General met with the leaders of many guerrilla movements and studied their organisations and command structures. The General reported to the Swedish government from the ground about the war in 1998 and 1999.
 - v) From 1997-2000 the General was Military Advisor to the Swedish Minister of Defence, Mr. Bjorn von Sydow. The General accompanied Mr. Bjorn von Sydow on several trips to Angola, Namibia, South Africa, Kenya, Morocco, Congo, Uganda, etc. The General and Mr. Bjorn von Sydow met with government leaders and members of opposition parties.
 - vi) As Supreme Commander of the Swedish Armed Forces, the General was responsible for all operations where Swedish personnel were involved. During the General’s tenure, this included Congo, Liberia, Sierra Leone, Angola, and Western Sahara. As Supreme Commander, the General was also responsible in Sweden’s support building up African peacekeeping units.
 - vii) In 2003 the European Union carried out peace enforcement operations in Bunia, Congo. Swedish troops were involved in fighting situations with guerrilla groups. As Commander-in-Chief, the General studied the rules of engagement, guerrilla movements, and their command structures before launching the operation.

viii) Before retiring as the Supreme Commander, the General shifted the focus of the Swedish Armed Forces from national defence to international operations.

Johan Hederstedt

Johan Hederstedt was Commander of the Swedish Armed Forces, the largest state authority in Sweden between 2000 and 2004. During his time as Supreme Commander (Chief of Swedish Defence) he has executed the largest transformation of the Swedish Armed Forces in modern time. This includes a change from a defence of invasion to a more flexible response defence, a radical change including a strong internationalization of the whole defence. Hederstedt in the role as Supreme commander had the responsibility of yearly budget of 40 billion Swedish crowns.

Hederstedt has a great experience of executive leadership on a strategic and operational level in different levels in a large organisation.

During his time as Supreme Commander, he developed and set the basics of a new organisational and technical networked based structure of the Swedish defence. He has actively contributed to develop the leadership of the Swedish defence in different levels from a hierarchy sight of view to a leadership based on participation and delegation. The change of the defence has also concluded a complete integration of the military services. A total regional logistic solution was also phased out and was replaced by a solution based on a complete overview which has created large rationality and further improvement.

During 2001 Johan Hederstedt was President in the European Union Military Committee. He was in this capacity the chairman of the chiefs of defence of European Union. During this time the European Union military structure and capacity was formed and developed.

In December 2004 Johan Hederstedt got the mission of the government to coordinate and organise the aid work in Thailand after the Tsunami disaster. The primarily responsibility was to send home deceased swedish citizens.
